About the Centre

The Crime and Justice Research Centre is a leader in high-impact interdisciplinary criminological research and holds important partnerships with professional and research bodies across Australia and internationally. Launched in 2012, the Centre has a distinctive critical and applied research program, focusing on common challenges that confront citizens, governments and criminal justice systems around the world. The Centre is based at QUT's Gardens Point campus and operates in conjunction with the School of Justice in the Faculty of Law.

In keeping with the spirit of Reconciliation, CJRC members and staff acknowledge the Traditional Owners of the lands where QUT now stands, and recognise that these have always been places of teaching and learning. We wish to pay respect to their Elders - past, present and emerging - and acknowledge the important role Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people continue to play within the QUT community.

Centre Director's Report

It has been another exciting year for the Crime and Justice Research Centre (CJRC) with much to celebrate. Our membership has expanded with the inclusion of outstanding new appointments; and we have witnessed an exciting array of research activity with significant impact.

Our International Journal for Crime, Justice and Social Democracy continues to go from strength to strength, with a fourfold increase in the number of abstract views and PDF downloads in the past two years. The journal's editorial board is comprised of almost 50 leading international scholars from 15 countries and we are indebted to them for their support and active input. I would like to acknowledge the hard work of Kerry Carrington, John Scott, Kelly Richards and especially Alison McIntosh for all their efforts in ensuring that our journal is of high international quality, also thanks to our editorial board and especially our Adjunct Professors for their commitment and ongoing investment in CJRC's success.

It has also been an impressive year for CJRC's research output and this report highlights the many successes in granting, international collaboration, and quality peer-reviewed papers. It is also worth noting that almost all CJRC members have published books, or will do so shortly, with internationally reputable and highly regarded publishers. To be disseminating knowledges through diverse fora including authored monographs is an excellent contribution to the academic enterprise that we should collectively celebrate. We have also had several members receive prestigious awards and accolades, recognizing the quality of their work and their esteem in the field.

Of course, being a community of scholars committed to 'creating change for a just world', mobilises and activates us to speak out against injustice and uphold the values and principles of a progressive socially democratic society. In 2016, CJRC was instrumental in campaigning and ensuring that the Queensland Government passed legislation to remove children from adult detention in line with international law. This is research advocacy and impact at its very best and attests to the impact of sustained critical criminological scholarship. We have also had numerous colleagues speak publicly on various media issues throughout the year as part of our active research and public engagement strategy.

We have also convened a very successful seminar series as well as a number of symposia and colloquia which have been lively and well attended by stakeholders across government, industry, academia and the voluntary sectors. Many of public presentations have been podcasted on our website and through our social media platforms which have been very effective this year with a significant increase in followers.

In 2017 the 4th annual International Conference on Crime, Justice and Social Democracy conference at QUT will be co-hosted with the Asian Criminological Society in Cairns and we look forward to welcoming colleagues from around the world to explore the theme of Crime and Justice and the Global South.

It has been an outstanding year for the Crime and Justice and Research Centre and we look forward to 2017 with great enthusiasm and excitement. Finally, I would also like to acknowledge the outstanding contributions of our dedicated professional staff, namely Robyn Johnston, Alison Imber, Dominic Olm-Milligan, and especially Amy Gurd.

2016 New Members

Dr Angela Higginson

Dr Angela Higginson is a lecturer in the School of Justice, Faculty of Law, QUT. She holds a PhD in Criminology, a BA (Hons) in Psychology, a BA in Psychology and Philosophy, and a Graduate Certificate in Research Commercialisation. Prior to joining the School of Justice, Angela was a Lecturer and Research Fellow at the University of Queensland and also worked within the public sector as the Principal Advisor Statistical Research and Analysis in the Department of Emergency Services. Her PhD in Criminology developed statistical methods to understand patterns of Commonwealth fraud, working in partnership with the Australian Federal Police. Angela's recent work focuses on policing and community processes for crime control, with a particular interest in the evaluation of policing practice through systematic reviews and meta-analysis.

Dr David Santos Fonseca

David Fonseca holds a PhD in sociology from New York University (USA), a LL M from Utrecht University (The Netherlands) and a LL B from UFMG (Brazil). Before coming to QUT School of Justice, he was an Assistant Law Professor, teaching Criminal Law and Criminology in UFG (Brazil). Bringing together both a sociological and a legal background, his work adopts a socio-legal approach to criminal justice and investigates recent developments in punishment and crime control. In his previous research, he analysed the modernization process of the Brazilian society and its close relationship to patterns of punishment and social control, mostly in relation to the recent emergence of mass incarceration and high-crime rates in the country. Currently, he aims to broaden the scope of his research and engage in comparative work with the analysis of crime and incarceration trends in other postcolonial societies.

Dr Monique Mann

Monique is interested in socio-legal research on the intersecting topics of organised crime, cybercrime, police technology, biometrics and surveillance. She graduated with a PhD from the ARC Centre of Excellence in Policing and Security (CEPS), Griffith University in 2015. While completing her PhD Monique worked as a Research Assistant at CEPS, interned with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in Vienna, and was a visiting scholar at the Regulatory Institutions Network (RegNet) at the Australian National University. From 2013-15 Monique was a Research Analyst at the Australian Institute of Criminology (AIC) where she worked across a suite of projects on police information systems.

Mr James Morton

Mr James Morton has been a defence barrister for nearly two decades, practicing mostly in regional and rural areas of Queensland and the Northern Territory with indigenous clients. He has recently been appointed at Chairperson of the Queensland Sentencing Advisory Council and is currently lecturing and completing his PhD in the Law Faculty. His doctoral research is examining how Torres Strait Islander people fit within the criminal justice system.

Dr Angela Daly

Dr Angela Daly is Vice Chancellor’s Research Fellow in QUT’s Faculty of Law, working on a project examining intellectual property and regulatory aspects of renewable energy technology in Australia and the European Union. She comes to QUT from the Swinburne Institute for Social Research, where she was a Postdoctoral Research Fellow researching 3D printing – her book Socio-Legal Aspects of the 3D Printing Revolution was published by Palgrave Macmillan in June 2016. Dr Daly was awarded a PhD for her work, ‘Mind the Gap: Private Power, Online Information Flows and EU Law’ from the European University Institute’s Department of Law. Her PhD thesis was the joint winner of the 2013-2015 Vittorio Frosini Prize in legal informatics and information law, awarded by the Fondazione Calamandrei (Italy).

Dr Carol Richards

Dr Carol Richards is a Senior Research Fellow in QUT’s Business School. She is a food and agricultural sociologist specialising in sustainable food systems, food insecurity, agricultural land acquisition, food governance and new social movements. She has contributed to academic and public debates on issues relating to power and social justice in the global food system. Her work examines some of the most critical issues of our times, presenting a scholarly and empirically grounded critique of resource acquisition and distribution.

Dr Hope Johnson

Hope Johnson is a senior research associate with the School of Law, Faculty of Law. She completed her PhD earlier this year with her thesis on international food and agricultural law and policy. Her research interests intersect with human rights, environmental laws, intellectual property and innovation, and international trade and investment law in the context of food, agriculture and development.

Seminar Series

The 2016 CJRC Seminar Series was successfully coordinated by Dr. Helen Berents. Presenters included CJRC staff and visiting scholars from Australia and other parts of the world.

Thursday 17 March 2016 – Dr Karen Evans (University of Liverpool, UK): “Gender Responsive Justice: A Critical Appraisal”

At the end of the twentieth century a growing number of nations, states and organisations both national and supra-national in nature began to acknowledge that existing criminal justice and penal practices have not been sufficiently attentive to women’s needs and have, perhaps unintentionally, discriminated against women as a result. Consequently the concept of 'gender-responsive justice' - an orientation to working with women and girls which was based around a consideration of the special needs of women as prisoners and their particular pathways to offending was developed as a response. This presentation explored the development of this concept, the theories which have informed it, policy arenas in which gender-responsive justice has been attempted and the practices of gender-responsive justice which have subsequently emerged.

Thursday 21 April 2016 – CJRC Staff: “Thinking Aloud’: Work in progress seminar (session 1)

This new and exciting initiative presented a valuable opportunity for Centre staff to share ideas about their research in an informal and collegial setting. Nominated speakers were each given 10-15 minutes to present a brief overview of a project they were currently working on, followed by questions and feedback from the audience. The three speakers for the first ‘Thinking Aloud’ session included:

- Dr Matthew Ball: “Is it possible to decolonise queer criminology?”
- Dr Claire Ferguson: “Doing away with the missus”: Murder and crime scene staging by police officers.”
- Mr. Gordon Chalmers: “Is the constitutional recognition of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples not concerned with recognition at all?”

Thursday 19 May 2016 – Dr Larissa Sandy & Dr Anastasia Powell (RMIT University):

“Narrative constructions of women as victims in news and social media: Case studies from trafficking in Cambodia and sexual violence in Victoria (Australia)”

This seminar grappled with some of the vexed issues surrounding constructions of female victimhood in the print and social media. In the seminar, Sandy and Powell highlighted their arguments with respect to two very seemingly different criminal justice issues. The discussion addressed the similarities that exist in relation to the rhetorical strategies designed to establish female innocence and construct victimhood and the frictions that exist when women’s raw, physical suffering is used a means of creating solidarity in local and global audiences.

Friday 22 July 2016 – Professor Kerry Carrington, Professor Russell Hogg, Professor John Scott and Dr Helen Berents (QUT):
“Southern Criminology”

This seminar outlined how southern criminology aims to transform criminological agendas to make them more befitting, inclusive of and responsive to the global problems of justice and security in the 21st century. Southern criminology seeks to internationalise and democratise criminological practice and knowledge, to liberate it from its Anglophone northern bias, to renovate its methodological approaches and to inject innovative perspectives into the study of crime and global justice from the periphery. It is primarily concerned with the careful analysis of networks and interactions linking South and North but which have been obscured by the metropolitan hegemony over criminological thought. In this seminar, Russell Hogg revisited and reconsidered the dominant narrative of penal modernism from the standpoint of southern penalty; Kerry Carrington outlined how internationalising the gaze of feminist criminology is a vitally important project of southern criminology; Helen Berents drew on original ethnographic research in Los Altos de Cazuca to analyse how violence, insecurity and fear are woven into everyday life; and John Scott discussed his planned research on Torres Strait Islander peoples and crime and justice.

“Regulation in the security space”

Dr Clarke’s presentation considered regulatory failures in the security space by analysing a series of test-cases. The cases include PIAs for national security initiatives, natural and imposed controls over big data analytics, and the current challenges of the 'Internet of Things', remotely-piloted drones, and autonomous cars. Dr Clarke also compared the notion of a 'data protection impact assessment' (DPIA) that is embedded in the European Commission's GDPR with a normative model of what a PIA should look like. The test-cases suggested that the public is confronted by a wide array of regulatory failures.

Dr Mann’s presentation considered recent developments and oversight with automated facial recognition technology. Firstly, Automated Facial Recognition Technology (AFRT) and its law enforcement and border security applications were outlined, as well as its integration with image sources such as closed circuit television, social media and big data. Secondly, the presentation examined the existing privacy framework in Australia, arguing the legal system has lagged behind technological advancements, leading to a significant governance gap. Dr Mann concluded with a review of current oversight models, one of the most prominent being a biometrics commissioner to oversee the retention of sensitive personal information by government.

Thursday 22 September 2016, Dr Lesley Pruitt (Monash University):

“The Women in Blue Helmets: Gender, Policing, and the UN's First All-Female Peacekeeping Unit”

This project explored the story of the first all-female police unit deployed by India to the UN peacekeeping mission in Liberia in January 2007. It investigated how the unit was originated, developed, and implemented, offering an important historical record of this unique initiative. Examining precedents in policing in the troop-contributing country and recent developments in policing in the host country, the project offered contextually rich examination of all-female units, explored the potential benefits of and challenges to women’s participation in peacekeeping, and illuminated broader questions about the relationship between gender, peace, and security.

Thursday 6 October 2016, Professor Raewyn Connell (University of Sydney) and Dr Jarrett Blaustein (Monash University):

“Crime, Justice and the Global South”

Professor Connell’s presentation “Decolonizing knowledge for changing criminology” discussed a major problem in contemporary social science and its implications for criminology. This problem is the embedding of the modern research-based knowledge formation – professed in universities – in global structures of power, inequality and exploitation, from early-modern colonialism to contemporary neoliberal globalization. Professor Connell explored the coloniality of knowledge and the major division of labour in the global economy of knowledge; then introduced the other knowledge formations operating in the contemporary world - indigenous knowledge, alternative universalisms, and southern theory.

Dr Blaustein’s presentation “Ethical criminologists fly economy: process-oriented criminological engagement in the Global South” examined how criminologists from the Global North increasingly find themselves engaging with policy makers and practitioners in the Global South. While there are many pitfalls awaiting Northern criminologists undertaking or promoting their research in the Global South, Dr. Blaustein drew upon the idea of ‘civic criminology’ to argue that it may still be possible to do so in an ethical and potentially beneficial manner.

Thursday 27 October 2016 – CJRC Staff: “Thinking Aloud’: Work in progress seminar (session 2)

The second ‘Thinking Aloud’ session presented a valuable opportunity for Centre staff to share ideas about their research in an informal and collegial setting. Nominated speakers were each given 10-15 minutes to present a brief overview of a project they were currently working on, followed by questions and feedback from the audience.

Presenters included:

- Dr Cassandra Cross and Dr Kelly Richards: “Fraud victims’ experiences of qualitative interviews”
- Dr Angela Higginson: “Fear and loathing in the suburbs: positioning and punishing the immigrant ‘other’”

Key Centre Events

“Tainted love”: A symposium exploring the reality of romance fraud

On Tuesday 31 May 2016, The Crime and Justice Research Centre hosted an important symposium aiming to explore issues surrounding the prevention and support of romance fraud victims.

The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) reported that almost $23 million was lost to romance fraud by Australians in 2015. This figure increased to almost $55 million when adding in reports to the Australian Cybercrime Online Reporting Network and other disruption activities. Given the known low levels of reporting for this crime type, this figure is unlikely to represent the true extent of harm incurred by romance fraud.

Despite the magnitude of these losses, romance fraud remains somewhat of a hidden problem in society. Many victims are unable to disclose their situation to those around them, for a variety of reasons including the associated shame and stigma of this crime type.

Speakers for the event included:

- ❖ Sharon Armstrong – New Zealand campaigner and advocate for romance scam victims, she was herself caught up in a fraudulent relationship which led to her imprisonment in an Argentinian jail for attempting to traffick drugs and shared her personal story;
- ❖ Delia Rickard – Deputy Chair of the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission. Delia shared details of work being undertaken by the ACCC in seeking to prevent and educate consumers on romance fraud;
- ❖ David Hillyard – Acting Executive Director, Consumer Protection, Department of Commerce, Western Australia. David shared the success of “Project Sunbird” which is a collaborative initiative with the West Australian Police, targeting online fraud, including romance;
- ❖ Dr Cassandra Cross – Senior Lecturer, School of Justice, Queensland University of Technology. Cassandra provided some insights taken from romance fraud victims, based on a recent research project which examined the reporting experiences and support needs of online fraud victims in Australia.

“Monsters, Rebels, and Queers: Justice and the Outsider” Symposium

On Monday 15 August 2016, the Crime and Justice Research Centre hosted a ‘Monsters, Rebels, and Queers’ symposium with guests speakers Professor Alex Sharpe (Keele University), Dr Karin Sellberg (University of Queensland), and Dr Kiley Gaffney (QUT).

While those considered outside of the ‘normal’ have long been marginalised and stigmatised, some have also been seen as hopeful figures. Outsiders can illuminate the limits of our thought and of the ‘human’, and, as such, can challenge these limits, producing social, cultural, and political change.

The papers in this symposium looked at outsiders in many guises – monsters, rebels, and queers – particularly across pop culture, celebrity, literature, crime, and justice. The presenters examined the ways in which these figures illuminate forms of government and normalisation, and explored the variety of transgressive and transformative possibilities each of these figures holds. Doing so provided an opportunity to think in new ways about achieving justice in society, particularly through critical, feminist, and queer politics.

Presentations in this symposium included:

- ❖ "Scary Monsters: The Hopeful Undecidability of David Bowie" by Professor Alex Sharpe, Keele University;
- ❖ "Monstrosity, Mutation and the Female Grotesque in the Novels of Angela Carter and Jeanette Winterson" by Dr Karin Sellberg, University of Queensland
- ❖ "The Familiar Stranger: David Bowie and the Discursive Formation of Celebrity" by Dr Kiley Gaffney, QUT

School of Justice 25 Year Anniversary Breakfast

This year the School of Justice celebrated its 25th anniversary with a breakfast event in the Gardens Theatre. The School was established in 1991 at the request of the profession, following the Fitzgerald Enquiry. The enquiry highlighted the need for quality tertiary education for police officers. The School has since grown to become a leading centre for scholarship and teaching.

Over 85 justice professionals and academic staff attended the breakfast to celebrate the School's 25th anniversary, which included guest speaker Ms Christine Nixon, former Chief Commissioner of the Victorian Police.

Christine Nixon was Australia's first ever female Chief Commissioner of the Victorian Police, (2001 - 09) and before that was Assistant Commissioner of NSW Police (1994-2001). She has had 40 years' experience in policing, organisational reform, risk management, crisis management, corruption prevention, emergency management and human resource management. With a keen interest in women in leadership, as well as the prevention of corruption, Christine has written extensively on these policing issues and has been lead investigator on a number of Australian Research Council grants. Ms Nixon drew upon her 40 years of practical leadership and current research to deliver an insightful and engaging presentation about women in law enforcement and the workforce.

Other distinguished guests who attended the breakfast include:

- ❖ Hon Yvette D’Ath, Queensland Attorney General;
- ❖ Hon Wayne Swan, Federal Labour Member for Lilley;
- ❖ Mr Kevin Cocks, Anti-Discrimination Commissioner;
- ❖ Ms Julia Duffy, Dep Director of the Public Guardian;
- ❖ Mr Scott McDougal, Director Caxton Legal Centre;
- ❖ Mr Michael Hogan, Director General Dept. Communities and Child Safety;
- ❖ Emeritus Professor Raewyn Connell;
- ❖ Mr Tim Fairfax, QUT Chancellor;
- ❖ Professor Arun Sharma, Acting Vice-Chancellor;
- ❖ Professor Suzi Derbyshire, Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Learning and Teaching);
- ❖ Professor John Humphrey, Executive Dean of Law;
- ❖ Professor Mandy Thomas, Executive Dean Creative Industries Faculty;
- ❖ Professor Carol Nicholl, Executive Dean Education Faculty;
- ❖ Professor Ross Young, Executive Dean Health Faculty.

CJRC Co-hosted Events

QUT Crime Book Club: An Evening of Murder

On Tuesday 4 October 2016, the CJRC and QUT Bookshop co-hosted the inaugural Crime Book Club Launch with a reading and discussion of David Murray's book "The Murder of Alison Baden-Clay".

The event also featured a presentation by CJRC researcher and forensic criminologist Dr Claire Ferguson, who discussed offender manipulation of violent crimes.

Climate Litigation Roundtable Event

On Wednesday 19 October 2016, the CJRC co-hosted a Climate Litigation Event with Griffith University and Southern Cross University. This event provided a forum for ongoing constructive networking and debate on issues connected with climate litigation. Held at QUT Gardens Point Campus, this event was designed to facilitate an ongoing constructive discussion between academics, practitioners, activists and the judiciary about the direction of future climate change litigation in Australia and its possibilities. The event provided an academic forum in which the issues of obligation, risk, litigation and mitigation can be comprehensively explored. The aim is to build a network and provide a forum to advance the understanding of climate litigation in Australia.

Attendees included:

- ❖ Professor Reece Walters, Director of Crime and Justice Research Centre, Faculty of Law, QUT
- ❖ Professor Jacqueline Peel (Melbourne University)
- ❖ Ariane Wilkinson (Environmental Justice Australia)
- ❖ Sue Higginson (EDO NSW)
- ❖ Michael Berkman (EDO Qld)
- ❖ Professor Matthew Rimmer (QUT)
- ❖ Giri Sivaraman and Teagan Lewis (Maurice Blackburn Lawyers)
- ❖ Professor Brendan Mackey (Griffith University)
- ❖ Dr Nicole Rogers (Southern Cross University)
- ❖ Dr Rowena Maguire (QUT)
- ❖ Benedict Coyne (Anderson, Frederick, Turner Lawyers)
- ❖ Mark Baker-Jones: (Dibbs Barker)
- ❖ Bridget Lewis (QUT)
- ❖ Angela Daly (QUT)

Policing the Digital Age: Surveillance, Government Hacking and Rule-Of-Law Online

On Monday 7 November 2016, the Crime and Justice Research Centre co-hosted a seminar with the Law Faculty's Intellectual Property and Innovation Law Research Group.

The seminar featured presentations by two guest speakers from Deakin University, Dr Ian Warren and Dr Adam Molnar. The presentations examined the intersections between policing, technology, surveillance, and the role of criminal law in a digital age; highlighting issues of governance, social order and rule-of-law online.

"Cannabis Law Reform in Australia: Panaceas, Promise and Pitfalls"

On Monday 21 November 2016, the Crime and Justice Research Centre and the Law Faculty's Australian Centre for Health Law Research co-hosted an event with guest speaker Professor Ian Freckelton, Melbourne Law School. In this lecture, Professor Freckelton contextualised current movements toward reform of medicinal cannabis in Australia. He identified problematic issues that have surfaced in relation to comparable reform efforts in the United States and Canada, and the risks of abuse within such reforms. Professor Freckelton presented a conceptual and empirical basis for medicinal cannabis law reform in Australia and reviewed the conditions for which it can plausibly be asserted that cannabis has a sufficient level of therapeutic efficacy. He asserted that for law reform to be effective, it should be gradualist and engage the confidence of both medical practitioners and pharmacists, avoiding homegrown schemes and smokeable forms of the drug.

International Journal for Crime, Justice and Social Democracy

The International Journal for Crime, Justice and Social Democracy is an open access, blind peer reviewed journal publishing critical research about challenges confronting criminal justice systems around the world. The journal has a distinguished International Editorial Board of 50 leading scholars from law and criminology across 14 countries and 5 continents. Editors in Chief are Professor Kerry Carrington and Professor John Scott.

Last year, the journal was accepted for inclusion in the elite databases, Scopus and Web of Science. This year the journal received the DOAJ seal of approval, a global independent indicator of journal quality recognising high publishing standards, high level of openness, and adherence to best practice. With over 220,000 abstract views and over 148,000 PDF article downloads to date, the journal continues to attract exceptional interest and growth.

2017 International Conference

In 2017, the Crime and Justice Research Centre will co-host the Crime and Justice in Asia and the Global South International Conference with the Asian Criminology Society.

The conference brings together the 9th Annual Conference for the Asian Criminological Society, and the 4th biennial International Conference for Crime, Justice and Social Democracy. The purpose of co-hosting the two conferences is to promote a global criminology more befitting of the contemporary world in which we live.

The conference will take place at the Shangri-La Hotel in Cairns, Australia from 10-13 July 2017.

International speakers include:

- ❖ Professor Rosemary Barberet, John Jay College of Criminal Justice (USA)
- ❖ Professor Jianhong Liu, University of Macau
- ❖ Professor Raewyn Connell, University of Sydney
- ❖ Professor Chuen-Jim Sheu, National Tapei University
- ❖ Professor Guoling Zhao Peking University, China
- ❖ Professor Stephen Tomsen, University of Western Sydney
- ❖ Professor Elliott Currie, University of California
- ❖ Professor John Braithwaite, RegNet, ANU

Graduate Certificate in Domestic Violence

The School of Justice launched Australia's first interdisciplinary, university-based Graduate Certificate in Domestic Violence in 2016. The first cohort included 65 anti-violence advocates, child protection staff, police officers, counsellors, lawyers, psychologists, health care workers and other professionals with a wealth of experience in the field as well as recent university graduates. The Graduate Certificate in Domestic Violence is a great example of evidence-based teaching for the real world. It was conceived after research on domestic violence education in Australia identified significant gaps in opportunities for university training. The units were refined with input from more than 100 community organisations and professionals who work in the field, and include JSN201 Dynamics of Domestic Violence, JSN202 Children and Family Violence, JSN203 Reducing Lethal Risk, and JSN204 Working with Domestic Violence Victims. The course is delivered fully online in order to provide flexible study for working professionals as well as opportunities for real-time discussion. The course was taught by CJRC experts Molly Dragiewicz, Claire Ferguson, and Jodi Death with additional lecturing by Dr Claire Moran and PhD candidate Justine Hotten, drawing upon their extensive knowledge of the evidence base on domestic violence, homicide, child abuse, and child protection.
