

Team and Group Coaching: Igniting Organisational Energy

This workshop focuses on the power of coaching to energise sessions and contribute to organisational energy and productivity.

Much of organisational life operates in teams and groups, yet we give limited attention to how to maximize value from the way these operate.

This workshop focuses on the power of coaching to energise sessions and contribute to organisational energy and productivity.

Evolve with QUTeX

We invite existing teams to attend the workshop to challenge their processes and engagement. In addition, we invite individual participants to attend and combine with others on the day to work in groups to explore new approaches to team and group life. The workshop considers teams and groups with the aim of energizing the organisational system.

We will surface issues that participants are facing in their current contexts and use advanced team and group coaching instruments and methodologies to explore new approaches and solutions, always from the perspective of organisational strategies, cultures, systems, objectives and functioning.

Who should participate?

This one-day workshop has been designed for business leaders and managers with an interest in sharpening their leadership, coaching and facilitation skills and impact, building high performance teams and project groups, and building organisational capability through a systems approach to team and group functioning.
